Home Improvement Tips

Winter is usually the time we think of how to stay warm and snug without running up the utility bill. A few tips to consider:

- Weather stripping doors and windows is a good starting place, but you should also consider checking out your air ducts for leaks and openings around your fireplace. Small gaps can let in a lot of cold air.
- Window coverings that can let the sun's heat in during the day and keep the cold out at night, such as insulated drapes or shades, can be an easy way to reduce heating costs.
- So you've checked all the small stuff and your home still seems drafty, check with your local energy company about a free energy audit. It may be time to increase or replace your insulation.

Featured Contractors

At Allred Heating Cooling Electric, you'll always find knowledgeable, friendly service you can trust. As a licensed HVAC contractor, they take care of the 3 primary functions of a home heating and cooling system: Heating, Ventilation, and Air Conditioning.
